SKIDDING AUTO CRASHES INTO MOKENA CAR

While Mr. Hugo Neithammer and daughter Audrey of Mokena were returning from New Lenox last Saturday morning, they had the unpleasant experience of having another auto run into them.

Mr. Neithammer noticed the oncoming car skidding on the slippery highway and he pulled off to the shoulder of the road to avoid a possible collision, but when the car, which was from Indiana, came near them, it rammed into the Neithammer car, hitting it in the front end. The radiator of the Neithammer car was crushed and the driver's side of the other car was badly crushed also. No one was injured except a few scratches on Audrey's knee.

As this happened near the round barn just east of New Lenox, they telephoned from there to the Cooper and Hostert garage in Mokena who towed the Mokena car home.

Maple Street Youth Accidently Shot By Friend

The Elbert Sievert farm home on Maple road west of Marley was the scene of an accidental shooting affair last Sunday afternoon and again it was the same old story of not knowing the gun was loaded.

According to a report made by Deputies of the Will County Sheriff's office Arthur Myrberg Jr., 12 year old son of Arthur Myrberg Sr., Gordon Road, R. 2 Joliet took his ".22 caliber rifle and went to visit Donald "Bud" Sievert also residing on R.2 Joliet.

The Sievert family came to Joliet and left the two boys alone at the Sievert farm. The boys played in the barnyard for sometime and then went into the house and read the Sunday comics following which they went to the dining room and started playing with their rifles.

According to Myrberg's story the Sievert boy pointed his "Winchester" .42 caliber at him and pulled the trigger. The rifle was not loaded. Myrberg believing his gun was also empty, pointed it at Sievert and pulled the trigger. There was a report of a discharge cartridge and Sievert slumped over into a davenport on which he was sitting and asked Myrberg if the gun was loaded. He said he felt a burning sensation in his throat.

Myrberg called the Sheriff's office also Dr. Janet Holt of New Lenox and Dr. E. G. McMahon of Mokena. When the Sheriff's Deputies arrived they found the two physicians treating the wounded youth for a gunshot wound in the left side of the neck. The Dames Ambulance of Joliet was summoned and the wounded youth was taken to Silver Cross hospital where x-rays were taken to determine where the bullet was lodged in the throat. Dr. G. Duran house physician of Silver Cross said a surgical operation would be required to remove the bullet.

TINLEY AMERICAN LEGION AUX. TO HOLD CAKE WALK

The American Legion Auxiliary of Tinley Park will hold a "Cake Walk" Saturday, February 9, 1946 in the village hall. There will be dancing to the finest music from 8 o'clock until you are too tired to dance and there will also be delicious home-baked cake and good coffee for your refreshment.

A "Cake Walk"? Surely you young folks remember how the strutting and knee-lifting cake walk used to be danced. Well, we'll let you dance very nicely two or three dances and then we'll charge you ten cents to enter the cake walk. You and your partners will cake walk until the music stops, at which time you will stop on numbered cardboards placed on the floor. The lady or gentleman who stops on the lucky number will be the recipient of a cake baked by one of the ladies of the Auxiliary. Fun! Of course and good food too. What more could you want?

Oh, you want to know what your dimes will be used for? Before the year is over, the Rehabilitation load of all service organizations will be doubled. For this reason we are asking you to join us in fun so that we can join you in service. Every penny of the money received at this cake walk will be used to purchase "Projected books". These books are a special, newly developed floor projector and books which have been photographed on microfilm to be used by bedridden patients who would otherwise spend many weary hours looking at the blank ceiling. It is so designed that, with a simple click of a button with one finger, the patient may read a book whose pages are projected on the ceiling above his head. Each projector has an accompanying library of 30 to 40 books and the entire library of some 600 books of interest to all types of persons has been filmed. There is even a special section of color cards.

Last year you had fun with us and enabled us to purchase albums of records to be used in the hospitals and ward rooms. The year before you helped us purchase folding wheelchairs which enables many a boy to spend the weekend away from the hospital with friends and relatives. And so through the years.

We will be looking for you to play and work again. When? Saturday night February 9, 1946 at the Village Hall. 8 to 9?

The bank has declared a 67 percent—Mrs. James F. Mehren, Rehabilitation.

MISSOURI SNOW SHOVELERS

WASHINGTON. — The problem of snow removal from the sidewalks around the "Summer White House" created something of a problem just before President Truman paid his Christmas visit to Independence, Mo.

At first nothing was done about the snow around the Truman mansion. Secret service agents guarding the house said it was their job to guard, not to shovel. Finally James T. Hopkins, aged 59, got out his horse Dick, aged five, and with a home-made snow plow cleared the snow from the North Delaware street side of the Truman home. But he didn't have time to clear the West Van Horn road side because he had to clear the walks used by children.

One day before Mrs. Truman arrived, however, George Dodsworth, president of the Independence chamber of commerce, called out the chamber's six new directors. He told them that the snow around the "Summer White House" would have to be cleared and their initiation into the chamber would be to do the job.

They did a good job. The walks around the Truman home were thoroughly shoveled.

They did not, however, tackle the drive in the rear of the house. So next morning, two employees from the highway department arrived to clear the driveway. They had shoveled for about 20 minutes when the first lady appeared on the back porch.

"You are shoveling gravel on the grass," admonished Mrs. Truman, always a meticulous housekeeper.

There were some explanations that they had been sent by the highway department to clear the snow.

"I don't care who sent you," replied Mrs. Truman. "I want you to quit."

Which is exactly what they did.

Mrs. Truman left instructions with a secret service agent not to let anyone scoop snow from the drive. And no one has.

THE OTHER LaFOLLETTE.

When the name LaFollette is mentioned in Washington, most people think of the senator from Wisconsin, who succeeded his crusading bull-moose father. But another LaFollette, from Indiana, not Wisconsin, who sits in the house of representatives, not the senate, is also attracting more and more attention.

Empty chairs fill up quickly when Rep. Charles LaFollette takes the floor for a speech. Colleagues may sometimes disagree with the two-fisted Indiana Republican, but they agree that what he says usually is interesting and never fails to pack a wallop.

In fact, one of his recent speeches packed such a wallop that conservative colleagues on the Republican side almost swooned. For LaFollette attacked that super-sacred cow, states' rights, and before he was through had virtually de-horned the animal.

"There are no such things as states' rights," declared the red-headed Hoosier. "There are rights of citizens who live within a state. The man who speaks of state sovereignty speaks the language of totalitarianism. There is only individual sovereignty."

Colleagues on both sides of the aisle listened in amazed silence. Only congressmen to answer were two Republicans: Jensen of Iowa and Bates of Massachusetts. Significantly, no whippers came from southern Democrats.

"Did not the sovereignty of the states exist long before the federal government was established?" asked Bates.

"Yes, but man existed long before the state of Massachusetts," shot back LaFollette. "The state of Massachusetts did not create its citizens and does not own them. The citizens own the state. In the continental congress and the convention which created the constitution . . . the issue was not states' rights."

"The issue was, 'Shall the people determine that they can be better served by a (federal) government with power over the state.' That is the constitutional answer, and it is the only answer that parallels with any idea of the innate dignity and honor of mankind. From that premise I do not yield, nor shall I ever yield, God giving me the strength to retain my intellectual, moral and spiritual integrity."

CAPITAL CHAFF.

Since publication of General Marshall's letter to Governor Dewey telling how we were cracking Japanese and German codes, every major government has been changing its codes almost daily. In addition, the best cryptographers in the world are now hard at work in every capital trying to figure out new unbreakable codes. All suspect we have broken their codes too. . . . The row between Mayor Maestri of New Orleans and Jimmy Comiskey was patched up at a secret caucus.

SMALL PROFIT MARGIN

Two Irishmen going to the races took a keg of whisky to sell there. Keenly aware of the temptation the liquor would offer to their own thirsts, the partners firmly agreed that neither should take a drink from the cask without paying for it. One man had three-pence, the other nothing.

Presently the man with the three-pence grew thirsty, and paid his coin to the other for a drink. The other man soon felt parched and gave his partner back the three-pence for a snifter. This went on all the way to the races, first one paying and the other, until all the whisky was consumed.

The partners stopped to count their profits.

"Begorra!" they cried in unison. "A whole keg o' whisky sold, and what have we got to show for it—only three-pence!"

CHOOSY FISH

Sailor—A woman fell overboard from a ship yesterday and a shark came up, looked her over, and swam away.

Soldier—He didn't bite her?

Sailor—Now, he was a man-eating shark!

Hot Cold

The tallest story I ever heard was of a farmer friend of mine up in North Dakota. One winter he put some water on the fire to shave with. Before he noticed the kettle was boiling. So he set it outside to cool. A minute later it had frozen. But it had frozen so quickly the ice was still warm enough to shave with.

School Daze

Teacher—Name one thing that Edison was noted for.

Scholar—He invented the first rank.

Teacher—What on earth is a "rank"?

Scholar—I dunno, but it says in the book here that "Edison was an inventor of the first rank."

Patient Explainer

Stranger—What's that whistle blowing for?

Native—There's a fire somewhere.

Stranger—But why do they blow the whistle for the fire?

AN INNER SANCTUM MYSTERY
STARRING ARAB AND ANDY BLAKE WNU FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: Lt. Andy Blake and his wife, Arab, discovered evidence of a spy ring headed by a Mr. Jones. They went to Andy's home, knowing that Jones would follow. Renee, Jones' agent, came through the window and was captured by Andy and Arab. Arab in trying to escape, was captured by Jones. When Jones broke into the cellar he took Renee, but left Andy, believing him dead. Andy went to his superior and reported all the facts. He then rushed to a service station, friendly to Jones, tied up the operator. Before he could get away a car with friends of Jones drove up. They made Andy get in with them. He had got word through to intelligence, but not in time.

CHAPTER XIV

"Keep the change," I said, handing the coins back to her and gripping her hand hard. Her mouth closed limply. She looked at me in wonder but didn't speak. I had almost been spraining my eyes trying to give her a warning.

We went back to the car, and the driver said, "Got dough, have you? What else you got in your pockets?"

They gave me a fast cleaning, found a ten-dollar bill, a quarter, my pencil, a watch and a handkerchief. They let me keep the handkerchief. There was nothing suspicious for them to find. My dog tags were in a corner of the garage back near Washington, and my A.G.O. card was in my blouse also back in the garage.

We headed north, circled Camden, and swung east. Route signs announced: Lakehurst, Toms River, Lakewood, Barnegat, Manahawkin, Beach Haven. It didn't pay for me to make quick moves now. When I reached suddenly for my handkerchief to catch a sneeze, a big hand locked my wrist. The guy was fast. I sneezed and told him what I wanted and he released his grip. A half-hour later the same move brought me a clip on the jaw and a growled order to sit still. They were getting jumpy as they neared the hangout.

The sun dove into a foxhole on the mainland. For a few minutes the western sky dripped splotches of red into the bay, then it was dark. No street lights came on. The island was dimmed out. The car crept south on cowl lights. Beach Haven drifted past like a ghost town. I had been there once for a week end. We had gone fishing for kings and flounders in Beach Haven Inlet, and had caught dog sharks and skates. The Inlet wasn't far south of Beach Haven. The hangout must be near.

Two miles farther on we swung over to the bay, and stopped. There was nothing interesting to be seen except a small shack and a dock that weaved tipsily out into the bay. The driver patted a tune on the horn. A man came out of the shack, peered doubtfully at us.

"Take a good look, Pop," the driver snarled. "You better make sure I got the same number of whiskers I had last time or I might be a different guy."

"I know you," the man said, "and I know your friend back there, but I don't know that feller in the corner of the back seat."

"He's our business, Pop."

"Nobody was lookin' for you to come. What's up?"

"We got a reason. Where's the garvey?"

"It ain't here. Nobody was lookin' for you to come."

"So it ain't here. So nobody was lookin' for us to come. Get it back here!"

"Now, wait a minute," the man said. "This ain't rum-runnin' in twenty-nine. They's patrols on the beach and maybe a cutler lyn' off the inlet. You diddle around with flashlights and you'll be combin' thirty-caliber slugs outta your hair. It ain't healthy to signal at night."

"What are we supposed to do, swim? I couldn't make it across a bathtub."

"I got a rowboat. But it's two miles even if you could row straight, which you can't. The way the tide's takin' out you'd have to detour the inlet. You better lay over to mornin'."

"We got business that won't wait."

"Can you handle a sailboat?"

"You mean one of them laundry-on-a-raft things?"

"I don't guess you can."

I cleared my throat, and said, "I can."

The caretaker and driver looked at me, whispered together for a moment. Then the caretaker said, "What's a centerboard?"

"Centerboard?" I repeated.

"That's a keel you can drop to keep a shallow-draft boat from being shoved sideways by the wind. You raise it when you're going over shoals."

"I guess he can sail a boat," the caretaker said.

We left the car and walked out along the rickety wharf. An eighteen-foot oversize sneakbox was moored at the end. They ordered me to get it ready, and sat on the dock watching suspiciously while I made sail and fitted rudder and tiller into place. Then the two big men climbed in and huddled down inside the tiny cockpit, leaving the caretaker on the pier. Starlight gleamed on blue steel in their hands. They couldn't have looked much more worried if I had been playing with a bomb.

The caretaker dropped the hawser on deck, gripped the mast, and prepared to cast us off. "Wait a minute," I said. "What happens if the Coast Guard spots us?"

"Nobody'll bother you in the bay," he said. "Just don't go outside."

"He won't," one of my pals said.

The caretaker shoved us off. I brought in the sheet rope until the sail filled and tugged at my arm. Water chuckled under the hull. We slid out of the tiny cove. The figure of the caretaker, back on the dock, got fuzzy at the edges and faded. I took a deep breath. I felt good for the first time in twenty-four hours. Things were looking up. In a short time I would know the location of the hangout and maybe where to find Arab, and now I wasn't jammed helplessly in a corner of a car. This time it was my party. Lots of interesting things can happen in sailboats.

The man yelled, "Get this thing back on the road!"

I let the sheet rope run free. The boat came back to an even keel, lost headway. The hands loosened on my throat. I gave him a lecture on sailing, explaining that all sailboats tilt in a breeze.

She looked at me in wonder but didn't speak.

The wind was south-southwest and the big sneakbox wouldn't point close into the wind and I had to tack. The boom swung over me and my passengers almost shot me. I explained that it was called going about and that often in a sailboat you couldn't head right where you wanted to go. You had to zigzag to it, first on one tack and then on another.

I demonstrated how the sail fluttered and spilled wind when you tried to point too close into the direction from which the wind was coming. They grumbled about that. They said it was the screwiest setup they ever heard of. They wanted to know why anybody had been crazy enough to invent sailboats when motor boats were so much better. They complained for several minutes but finally had to let me have my way.

We racked along smartly. In half an hour a nun buoy slipped by and the inlet opened up off to port. The boat heaved in channel swells. The stars were making a night of it. You could see surprisingly far, but I couldn't spot the loom of a cutter across the sequin shimmer of waves. A can buoy bobbed past, heeling far over. It took plenty of tide to do that.

"You better tell me exactly where you want to go," I said. "There seems to be a little island across the inlet. I'll have to make a long tack west to clear it."

"That's the island we want," one of them said.

I peered south. At first I could only see a narrow strip of beach. Then a shadow formed, bulky and dark, in the middle of the island. A house. A big one. "Where do we land?" I asked.

"There's a dock on the bay side."

"How do you boys get away with it?" I said. "Don't nobody ask what you're doin' this time of year?"

One of them grunted, "We're supposed to be fishing. For striped bass. A month ago the chief made me stand on the beach all day with a lousy pole and hunk of string."

I said innocently, "If you two guys would sit up here with me we wouldn't tilt so much."

"Not me. That boom's too much like a blackjack when it comes over."

"Maybe you're right," I said. Under cover of the darkness I looped the sheet rope around a cleat beside me. It was time to give them a final lesson in sailing. A lesson on the danger of jibing a sailboat when the sheet rope can't run free. In a jibe, you turn the stern into the wind instead of the bow, and the boom thunders across with the full leverage of the wind behind it. Jibing is a racing trick and nothing to fool with even in a mild breeze.

"Going about," I droned. "Hard-a-lee!"

The big men ducked their heads. They didn't see that the stern was creeping into the wind instead of the bow . . . and probably it wouldn't have meant anything to them, anyway. We were running before the wind now. Water hissed past. The rudder got sluggish. I jammed it hard over. A little more . . . a . . . little . . . more . . .

The taut sail crumpled for an instant. Then it belled the other way, flitted across the boat like the beat of a giant wing. I dodged the battle-axe sweep of the boom. In the next split second the sheet rope snubbed the boom up short. The sail flapped tight, bellowing like a gun fired in a barrel. The power behind it switched to cleat and mast and hull. Wood shrieked and cracked. I half started a dive overside when the boat reared and flipped me out sprawling.

For a few seconds everything was scrambled. Water slapped half the air out of my lungs. I went down, fighting the drag of sweater and pants and shoes. Sparks were flickering in my head before I clawed back to the surface. I gulped air twice, let myself go under and wrestled out of the sweater. It wasn't so hard to climb to the surface this time. After a few breaths I curled under to work on my shoes. The laces turned into angry little snakes, but I finally managed to loosen them and to kick off the shoes. Then I relaxed, treading water, and let the tide carry me along.

It was difficult to see anything. Salt stung my eyes and the black glitter of waves tired them. There was no sailboat. Once or twice something gleamed faintly out across the waves. It might have been the curved green bottom of a boat. Once I heard a distant shout. It might have been a man calling, a man who couldn't swim across a bathtub. I thought grimly: if they don't like it here, let 'em swim back where they came from.

The water was cold but not numbing. I peeled off my shirt. The island where we had been heading seemed to be about a quarter mile away. I angled toward it with a quiet side stroke, going with the tide instead of trying to fight it. I would miss the inlet side of the island, but with luck there would be a return eddy to help me make the ocean side of the beach.

It took less time than I had estimated. The tide set toward the island after boiling through the inlet narrows. And my angled course helped. In a way, I used some of the force of the tide just as the boat had used the wind. I was still fairly fresh when I got into the pound and drag of the breakers. Fresh enough to take a few bruising somersaults and struggle out of the undertow onto a hard-packed beach.

I didn't take time to rest there. The beach was empty. Too empty. There wasn't even much driftwood. The house was only a hundred yards away, and a big dark blob on the beach might make an observer curious. I stumbled across the beach and up a dune. I flattened to the sand, gasping. The breeze chilled my body and the sharp beach grass stung my face, but gradually a little strength seeped back into my arms and legs. I sat up to study the situation.

A hundred years ago, perhaps, a sand bar had started at the bottom and worked its way up in the world. Not very far up, however. From north to south it was only a few hundred yards long. You could cross its widest part with two or three throws of a clam shell even allowing for the way clam shells curve. Low dunes, protected by a double row of piling stuffed with brush, formed its backbone.

The house sat on a central dune, close enough for me to pick out details. It was a gaunt three-story affair with unpainted shingles weathered almost black. In its shadow was a concrete structure the size of a four-car garage. Starlight silvered a small boathouse on the bay side, a dock, and a board gangway leading across the bayside marsh to the house.

The place might once have been a sportsmen's club, in the days before civilization caught up with the ducks and strippers and big tide-running weakfish. Judging from what I had heard earlier, the house had been a drop for rum-runners in the twenties. Apparently the ambitious sand bar hadn't done so well recently. It might have moved in better company if it had stayed on the bottom.

I hadn't the slightest idea what to do. My resources consisted of a pair of pinks, wet; one undershirt, wet; one pair of shorts, wet, and one handkerchief, wet. I began to realize what an unusually helpless guy had been carrying the name of Andrew Blake around for thirty-odd years. I wasn't a good enough swimmer to make the mile-wide crossing back to the main island. Of course I could send signals. All I had to do was to spot a Coast Guard cutter and find a flashlight and locate somebody who would give me lessons in international code.

THE LAWS OF A PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—I will delight myself in thy commandments, which I have loved.—Psalm 119:47.

Law is necessary to order. Basic laws have been laid down by God for the orderly administration of His universe.

Physical laws are of great importance, but of even deeper significance are the moral and spiritual laws which control the human life. There is in the world a moral law—a distinction between right and wrong—which man may ignore only to his own sorrow, and which he cannot abrogate or destroy. All laws of men which are true and right are founded on this underlying moral law, and they are in reality simply a development and interpretation of "God's Code of Morals"—the Ten Commandments.

These fundamental laws were given to Israel at Mount Sinai, but they speak to us with remarkable freshness and directness. They merit more extensive study than we can give them in this limited space, but we can note their broad outlines and certain practical applications. There are two divisions—one concerns man in his relation to God, and the other in his relation to men. We have:

I. A Right View of God (vv. 1-11).

The first and most important question to be asked regarding any law is, "By whom was it established?" Legislation by an unauthorized person or organization has no power over others. Who gave the Ten Commandments? Verse 1 tells us "God spake all these words."

Men may sneer at theology as being outmoded, but the fact is that Christian doctrine is the only safe foundation for Christian character. 1. Whom to Worship (vv. 2-5). There can be but one true God, and He alone is to be worshiped. He is a personal being, ready to enter into communion with each one of us. No image or likeness can take His place. Bowing down before idols, no matter what they may be called, is expressly forbidden by God.

2. How to Worship (vv. 6, 7). We are to love Him and to keep His commandments. There is to be no sham about this, for no matter how sweet and pious may be the praise and prayer of man, he has taken the Lord's name in vain unless he keeps the Lord's commandments by holy living.

3. When to Worship (vv. 8-11). God has ordained that man should not incessantly bear the burden of toil. He is to have a day of rest and a time for worship, undisturbed by the duties and responsibilities of daily labor.

America needs a mighty stirring up about the desecration of the Lord's day. The stalwarts of the last generation fought a valiant battle against a rising tide of secularism and worldly pleasure. Now no one seems to care. Do you? "Six days shalt thou labor." Give God one day out of seven.

II. A Right View of Man (vv. 12-17).

To be right with God means that we will also be right with our fellow-man. Conversely, the man who is manifestly wrong in his relation to his fellowman is either not right with God at all, or he is not living out his Christian life in practice. This should show in:

1. Family Life (v. 12). The fifth commandment has to do with the relation between child and parent. There is a plain and direct command that father and mother should be honored. Only in respect and obedience to parents can the child possibly find true and proper development.

Parents who have permitted children to go astray during the war years will need to stress anew the God-required obedience to their authority.

2. Physical Life (vv. 13, 14). God is interested in our bodies. Already we have noted His provision for a day of rest each week. Now we are reminded of the sanctity of human life. "Thou shalt not kill," and remember there are many other ways to kill a man other than shooting him.

Let us be sure that we are not a party to the destruction of anyone's life either by reason of carelessness or greed.

Note the emphasis on adultery. Moral uncleanness, which is so awfully common in our day, is one of the most effective methods of destroying the body even while degrading and defiling the soul with sin.

3. Social Life (vv. 15-17). "Thou shalt not steal"—and remember any dishonest appropriation of what does not belong to you is stealing, call it what you will. And "false witness"—how it has honeycombed our very civilization! Not a little of it is found within the church, more shame upon us! Lastly, we come to "covetousness"—which has been called one of the "respectable sins of nice people." It is subtle and often hidden. Let us root it out of our own lives by God's grace.

The Right Man In The Right Place Is Fred E. Busbey candidate For Congressman

Urging that the federal government take steps to balance its budget and reduce Federal payrolls during the years the emphasis will be put on our economic and domestic recovery, Fred E. Busbey, former Congressman from the 3rd District, today announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for the same office, at the April primary. Despite the fact that thousands of people voted the straight Democratic Ticket in 1944 because they feared to change Presidents in the midst of war, the slight change of but 1 percent in the voters would have elected Busbey. He ran 3110 votes ahead of the Republican National Ticket while his Democratic opponent trailed 11,154 votes behind Roosevelt. This is pointed to as proof that he is an exceptionally strong candidate and will help the entire ticket.

"It is generally agreed that once reconversion is completed and present labor disagreements settled, the people of this country have a right to look forward to a long period of untroubled prosperity. Federal expenses and payrolls must be cut to the bone," Busbey declared, "and the budget balanced in order to meet any possible future emergency. We must drastically reduce the federal debt in order to relieve the tax pressure on the lower income groups and upon business and industry which must supply the jobs that will keep America working."

"During the war and prior thereto when the New Deal was taking over the functions and prerogatives of the states, the states were able to reduce their outstanding indebtedness and build up tremendous cash reserves," Busbey pointed out. "This at the expense of the Federal government which means the American people. It is high time that states and municipalities should be made to reassume their rights and proper functions of self-government while they are in a financial position to do so."

Busbey, a veteran of the first World War and always a champion for veterans and the underprivileged, spoke feelingly of the plight of veterans of this war. "We are not doing enough for our veterans and what we are doing is not being done fast enough," Busbey declared.

As a member of the World War Veterans Legislative Committee in the House of Representatives, he fought untiringly to have incorporated in the "G. I. Bill of Rights" every possible advantage to veterans of World War II. Busbey not only predicts the veterans will, but urges them to, take an active part in politics.

"Due to the fact that, despite their glowing promises, the starry eyed planners have not been able to keep the cost of living down, there can be no argument regarding the fact that labor is entitled to an increase in wages to make up this difference. But we must settle labor differences at once so that industry can get to work providing jobs at substantial wage levels. I have a particular interest in that group of people who are on a fixed salary basis, commonly referred to as the 'white collar worker'." Busbey emphasized, "and plead with all industry to pass onto this group the same increases obtained by other groups thru collective bargaining."

Busbey, while a member of Congress established an outstanding reputation for independence, sound thinking and the courage of his convictions. As Americanism Director, American Legion Dept., of Illinois, he inaugurated many very constructive programs. International politics, history and Americanism work have been his major interests since World War I.

Educated in the Chicago Public Schools, Busbey studied at Armour Institute, now Illinois Tech., before volunteering in the regular army in 1917, later transferring to the 124th Field Artillery, 33rd Division, where he served throughout World War I. After the war, he studied accounting, economics and business administration at Northwestern University, then entered the investment field in 1921. He founded Fred E. Busbey & Co., in 1931 and still heads it. He has a first-hand knowledge of the problems of labor having worked as a guard on the elevated railroad to defray his expenses while in high school and college and at the same time was a member of what is now Division 308, Amalgamated Association Electric Railway & Motor Coach Employees of America Union.

With his wife and 16 year old son, Busbey lives at 9144 S. Hoyne Ave. He is a member of the Auburn Post, V.F.W., and Beverly Hills Post, American Legion.

The following letter from Sgt. Arthur Frundie of Alpine was received by Mr. and Mrs. Ferry also of Alpine: Germany, Dec. 14, 1945

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Ferry: I received your swell letter of Dec. 3, yesterday and sure was glad to hear from you. After reading all the news, it seems as tho I've been away at least six years. As yet I am still in the hospital. Was flown to Paris a week ago for a skin grafting operation which winds up the operations for good, I hope. All that's left now is to get life and strength back in the leg and home I come. Which will be sometime in January. Yes I guess we have them by the seat of the pants now. I am in a hospital in Frankfurt where the big trial of the war criminals is taking place.

Germany sure is wrecked and the people sure are going through a lot of suffering. I am thankful the war was fought over here instead of back in the U. S. Sure is a lot of disease floating around among the people. I can remember back one town called Hieboan. We had taken the town with little resistance and had set M. P.s up to direct traffic. The next morning we found six of them hung in the center of town. Gen. Patch was so mad, he called all troops out and called the air corp in, and bombed h... out of the town.

On warm days, each town has that stinking smell of death. There's thousands upon thousands laying under rubble. I sure thank you for sending me Orville's address. I am going to marry a girl from Long Island, New York, She's quite a kid..... Send my regards to Junie, Eddie and the whole gang. As ever, Art.

Political Medicine For America

On November 19, 1945, President Truman sent a special message to the Congress asking for the enactment of legislation to provide medical care for practically every man, woman and child in the United States through a Federal Government agency.

On the same day Senators Wagner and Murray and Congressman Dingell introduced in the Congress bills (S 1606 HR 4730) to implement the requests of the President's message.

Socialized Medicine
President Truman stated, "What I am recommending is not socialized medicine." The proposals are more comprehensive and more far-reaching than any government medical care program ever attempted in any country with the possible exception of Russia.

Medical Dictator
The Wagner, Murray, Dingell proposals would establish a Political Appointee, the Federal Security Administrator as dictator in all matters relating to health. Working under him the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service would be authorized and instructed to:

1. Hire doctors, specialists, dentists, nurses, laboratory technicians and establish rates of pay.
2. Establish fee schedules for physicians and dentists' services.
3. Fix the qualifications for specialists.
4. Determine the number of individuals for whom any doctor or dentist may provide service.
5. Determine what hospitals or clinics may provide service for patients and under what conditions.
6. Provide for all wage earners and their dependents and for all self employed persons and their dependents, doctor, dentist, home nursing and laboratory care and hospitalization.

The Cost
It is estimated that the cost would be more than Four Billion Dollars annually. One man—The Surgeon General—would direct the spending of this stupendous sum.

Bureaucratic Army
Based on experience in other countries, it would take at least 300,000 lay bureaucrats to administer this system of politically distributed medical care. If you needed a doctor you might have to apply to a Bureau.

Germany Had System
Under Hitler Germany had a similar system. It was not so comprehensive. What Happened?

Shortly after VE Day, Col. Edw. D. Churchill Allied Mediterranean Forces' surgical consultant, toured six German military hospital areas and reported his findings to American correspondents. His over all conclusion was that German handling of wounded was about 20 years behind the American procedure. By and large, German doctors were victims of an apathy and a lack of ambition which would enrage a typical American doctor.

In Nazi philosophy, your race and politics mattered far more than your brains and talents. Without a doubt a similar condition would develop here under a system of politically distributed medical care.

American Medicine
Under the American system, American Medicine—American Doctors—have developed the most effective and most widely distributed medical care that has ever been provided for any comparable number of people anywhere at any time. The Medical care provided our armed forces conclusively demonstrated how much better it really is than any other system.

Easier Way to Pay
Doctors know that an easier method must be provided for paying the costs of unusual or prolonged illness. That is why so many prepayment plans and insurance programs are being developed. Given reasonable time for expansion these plans and programs will bring adequate relief.

Political Distribution of Medical Care
Political distribution of Medical Care would destroy our system of private medical practice. Do we want to destroy it? Rarely is cutting off the patient's head recommended as a treatment for a boil on the nose.

Two Things to Remember
1. Political distribution of medical care would entail making a public record of the characteristics and the most intimate and sacred personal relationships of each and every patient. The privacy of every human being would be invaded and violated. It can be imagined how the information might be used by the curious and unscrupulous.

2. The effectiveness of medical care is wholly dependent upon the skill of the physician. The American doctor is a human being—a personality. He must be free to act as an individual. He should not be robbed of his freedom of action and decision. Bureaucratic direction would destroy the factor that is the secret of his effectiveness.

President Truman has endorsed a system to provide political distribution of medical care in the United States. However, the Congress will have to pass the laws that would introduce this alien and totalitarian system into this country.

Off the Runway

Civil Air Patrol, Squadron 613-3 by 2nd Lt. Erlyne Conel

"Umbrella Expert" Every year is leap year for Mike Burson, a Dwyer, Indiana druggist who makes parachute jumps for "mental refreshment." Chances are you've seen one of Mike's special stunts, either at Chicago Hammond airport, the Civil Air Patrol Air shows, Exhibitions throughout the country or at National Air Races.

Mike once jumped from a plane at two thousand feet and made every effort to land in Francher Lake, situated within the race track at Crown Point, Indiana, to give the crowd the thrill of seeing a man wearing fifty pounds of equipment, land in water, and still come out okay.

Another specialty is falling one mile before pulling the rip cord. Once when racing another jumper to see which hit the ground first Mike won. His parachute opened just 500 feet above the ground! The white flour Mike uses to describe his path in the sky got in his eyes and blinded him. He let himself drop 'til he thought he had about 1000 feet.

Then there's the Double Jump! Leap from 3,500, open one parachute, then cut loose and fall another thousand feet before opening the second chute. Also, the night jump for the National Air Races at Cleveland. Mike leaped with a huge magnesium flare which developed between 200,000 and 300,000 candlepower. He carried the flare on a forty foot cable to prevent it from lighting the parachute, and also so it would strike the ground first, far enough away so he wouldn't land on it.

One Sunday at Lansing Airport (now known as Chicago-Hammond) Mike tried out bat wings. He "rigged" up a wierd looking costume of white cloth with webbing between his legs and feet. And wings attached from his legs to his outstretched arms. He left the ship at about 5,000 feet, spread his wings, and began to fly. However, he was upside down and decided to turn over and see the world. So he dragged in his left wing. This turned him over in the air, but put too much pressure on the other wing and the web between his legs, causing them to tear. With 1500 feet of altitude left, he opened his chute.

Once during a jump the rip cord on the flour bag tangled. Mike was afraid to drop the 25 pound sack for fear it might hit the crowd. And while tussling with the cord, did something no jumper does intentionally. His feet separated, throwing his body into a spin. He fell spinning and out of control five thousand feet through the air, then by getting his feet together again and extending his right hand into space he broke the spin, pulled the rip cords on twin chutes just in time to save his life!

According to druggist Mike, who has made hundreds upon hundreds of jumps, "It's a remarkable sensation to float down from the clouds with the greatest of ease, far, far above pills, cold cream and hair restorers!"

Via Air Mail. Here's an open letter to Rubinkam Airport's Instructor Roy Cleveland, now studying instrument flying at Meacham Field, Fort Worth, Texas:

Dear Roy: In answer to your letter to the gang, asking for news, here's what happened Sunday afternoon. For the first time in weeks the wind was down. And the sun flying high, making for plenty of action.

Buddy Ogden with observer Emory Nadler went Fox hunting six miles south of Monee in Cub 54. From the air they flushed five foxes for the 60 or 70 farmers, who managed to shoot only one. Buddy said the foxes are such a chicken killing nuisance, farmers have a big hunt every Sunday.

A friend of Lt. Jack Morton's, Bill Koenig, north side contractor, flew in from Fort Wayne. He flies his own plane for business and bases it at Sky Harbor.

Two of your students, Linda Tatterfield and Frank Levy were soloing in Cubs 00 and 54. One of Shorty's former students, Hal Staehling of Homewood, a Captain on detached duty with the Air Forces, flew his own 430 H. P. Vultee in from Union City, Tenn. to base it at Rubinkam.

Warrant Officer Bill Jacobs asked me to get in some thanks for the State Highway and Markham police. This is why. The students at Thorton High were awarded a six and one half ton Hellcat plane for selling war bonds. It was flown to Rubinkam, and became Bill's problem to deliver to the school. Police stopped all traffic between 159th and Dixie Highway, clearing the way. Oh yes, Out in the middle of the field, a solo student's engine quit. So, the student nonchalantly jumped out and began to prop the plane. Bill and Arnie raced out in the car, reaching the plane before the student succeeded in starting the engine. We all heaved a sigh of relief.

Be seeing you soon.
That's all for now.

Chicago and Northern Illinois—the Center of Your Market

Chicago's Merchandise Mart—the world's largest building under one roof

Here Is the Place—26,000,000 people live within an overnight freight haul of Chicago. Industries locating in the Chicago area enjoy many resulting economies: quicker deliveries incoming and outgoing; lower transportation costs; easy access to customers and suppliers; a constant flow of out-of-town buyers. One building alone—the Merchandise Mart—attracts 400,000 buying visits a year. And the Furniture Mart, for instance, another great central market building, is the acknowledged center of its industry. It is no wonder that Chicago is nationally known as the "Great Central Market."

Industrial Facilities Are Diversified—At the heart of this central buying and selling network, the Chicago and Northern Illinois territory forms a nucleus that is in itself a huge market and a huge source of supply. There are 5 million people in this territory, with an income that last year reached a rate of 7½ billion dollars annually. There are 10,000 manufacturing plants that make everything from abrasive wheels to X-ray equipment. Eighty-six per cent of all types of U. S. industry are represented here. Chicago has properly been called a "department store of industry"—a plus factor for industries which purchase some portion of their production from other plants.

that generally local and state taxes on manufacturing industries are only a small fraction of gross income.

The Time Is Now—At the present time industry is seeking to take advantage of strategic location as never before. Progressive businessmen are appraising the factors that make for the most economic location of their facilities. They are examining the unique features which make Chicago and its surrounding area the first choice for most industries. We are glad to assist their studies in as great detail as may be required. We are supplying them with services of trained industrial engineers who know intimately the resources that the territory commands. We will welcome your inquiry, too, and treat it confidentially.

Industries locating in this area have these outstanding advantages
Railroad Center of the United States • World Airport Inland Waterways • Geographical Center of U. S. Population • Great Financial Center • The "Great Central Market" • Food Producing and Processing Center • Leader in Iron and Steel Manufacturing • Good Labor Relations Record • 2,500,000 Kilowatts of Power • Tremendous Coal Reserves • Abundant Gas and Oil • Good Government • Good Living

Recording Telephone Conversions Governed

Devices to record telephone conversations should not be used without the full knowledge and consent of all parties to the conversation, and any plan which would permit their use otherwise would be regarded by telephone users as intolerable, Vice President Keith S. McHugh of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company testified at a Federal Communications Commission hearing. The Commission is investigating the need for such devices and possible means for letting telephone subscribers know when conversations might be recorded.

Speaking in behalf of the Bell Telephone Companies, Mr. McHugh said they feel that privacy is so important to the telephone user that anything which would shake his confidence in the privacy of his calls would seriously impair the usefulness and value of telephone service.

The Bell System has no objection, he said, to recorders on private telephone lines not connected to the general exchange telephone system; such lines are used by people closely associated in business who know whether they want their calls to be recorded.

For the user of general exchange and toll telephone service, Mr. McHugh reported that the Bell Companies have so far been able to devise only one plan which could give the user reasonable assurance that his conversations were not being recorded without his consent. Under this plan all exchange telephone lines on which recorders are used would be handled by an operator who would announce that the conversation might be recorded. This plan would require special equipment and extra operating time and expense. The Bell Companies stand ready to put it into effect if there is sufficient demand for it, subject to approval of regulatory authorities.

Veterans Must Register

Springfield, Ill. Jan.— Discharged veterans who were not registered to vote before they entered service have until March 11 to register with their local county clerks, Secretary of State Edward J. Barrett advised today.

This applies, the Secretary said, to veterans who may not have registered under the permanent registration prior to their entrance into service and also to persons who became of voting age while in the service.

Veterans who changed their permanent address and former members of the women's military services who have changed their names through marriage also were reminded to revise their registration. The deadline for making these changes is March 12.

One exception to the registration requirements for veterans applies to those who will be discharged within sixty days prior to an election. In these cases, Barrett explained, the discharged veteran may cast his vote on election day by making an affidavit to election officials at the polls on election day.

Those still in military service need not be registered to vote, but they must application for their ballots directly to the County Clerk in their county.

Barrett said that copies of the 1946 primary and election calendar may be obtained by writing his office.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

DICK: "I wonder how the distillers feel about that new movie built around an alcoholic."

OLD JUDGE: "It's funny you asked that, Dick... I was just reading a piece about it."

DICK: "What did it say?"

OLD JUDGE: "A very sensible statement. It said the beverage distillers are fully aware of this problem and are cooperating in every way possible to help solve it. The alcoholic is to the beverage distilling industry what the reckless driver is to the automobile industry. There is nothing wrong with the automobile, but in the hands of a man who doesn't know how to drive it or is reckless, it becomes a menace. Likewise, it's not the use but the abuse of alcoholic beverages that causes trouble."

DICK: "Wonder why it is most men can drink moderately and others can't?"

OLD JUDGE: "Intensive research at a great university has shown that most excessive drinkers are really sick people. They are suffering from some physical, social or emotional upset. And great strides have been made in developing clinical methods of helping these unfortunate people."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, January 13, was:
"SACRAMENT"

The Golden Text was:
"What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me? I will take the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of the Lord." (Ps. 116: 12, 13).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the spirit gave them utterance . . . Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost . . . And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread and in prayers." (Acts. 2: 4, 38, 42).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy.

"The magnitude of Jesus' work, his material disappearance before their eyes and his reappearance, all enabled the disciples to understand what Jesus had said. Herebefore they had only believed; now they understood. The advent of this understanding is what is meant by the descent of the Holy Ghost, — that influx of divine Science which so illuminated the Pentecostal Day and is now repeating its ancient history . . . is the living Christ, the practical Truth, which makes Jesus' resurrection and the life to all who follow him in deed." (pp. 42, 31).

Plan a Bathroom to Please Entire Family

CALL a family consultation when you're planning that new bathroom is the advice given farm folks in an article in nationally circulated Capper's Farmer. Then you'll not be forever after wishing the fixtures had been installed some other way. Juggle space and fixtures on paper, then when the final decision is reached, the work of installing the bathroom may go ahead without confusion.

If the family is large, you'll need more than one bathroom. Or if there can be only one, it should be planned to accommodate more than a single person at a time. Simple partitions, like those used in the bathroom pictured above, will do the trick. The lavatory and toilet are separated from the tub. Further convenience is provided by the extra stool in the tub compartment.

Between adjoining bathrooms a partition bath may have a stool and lavatory available to each room and a tub compartment connection with both. If there are several children to get ready for school at once, have two lavatories in the bathroom. Better still, put one of the lavatories with a stool downstairs. Make a complete second bathroom by adding a prefabricated shower cabinet.

A bathroom ought to be pretty as well as utilitarian, the Capper's Farmer article points out. That will be easy enough with the good-looking fixtures now being manufactured. Porcelain enamel will be made in almost any shade your artistic heart desires. You'll also have a wide variety of wall finishes to choose from—plastic-finished wall-board, wallpaper, tile, tile board, paint, wall linoleum, structural glass. Linoleum and tile are the most popular floor coverings. All these are available in many colors and designs.

Here's How to Banish Washday Stooping

IT IS the stooping, bending and totting that make washday tiring, Dorothy Holladay points out in nationally circulated Capper's Farmer.

Among many homemakers who have changed their washday habits to eliminate fatiguing motions, she cites Mrs. Carl Frey of Iroquois county, Ill., in the magazine read by can also be sorted on a table or counter or from the table to several baskets placed on chairs.

Mrs. Frey's sliding clothes-basket saves time and bending. Holes were bored in each end of a sturdy wooden clothes hanger. From these holes wires are fastened. At the end of the wires are hooks to hold the handles of an ordinary basket. The top of the basket is then waist-high.

1,250,000 farm families. Mrs. Frey says that time and energy saving methods make washing easier, beside saving an hour each washday. Here are some of the tips she gives other housewives:

The washing machine should be high enough for ease in working. Mrs. Frey has elevated hers by putting bricks under the legs. A wooden platform built to fit would serve the additional purpose of insulating the washing machine.

Sorting clothes on the floor requires constant stooping. Mrs. Frey separates clothing into several baskets set on wooden crates. Laundry

A clothespin apron snaps over the hanger. The hanger hook slides along the clothesline as she pushes the contrivance ahead of her.

BE IN THE PAPER

THE Pacific coast baseball league was recently turned down in a major league bid. It is quite possible that the West coast stretch isn't entirely major territory as far as all its cities or teams are concerned. This also applies to both the American and National league, which in many places carry a strong minor league touch, as everyone connected with baseball knows.

But the main point is that in a general sporting way the Pacific coast in many spots has more of a big league touch than the East, Midwest or the South. And the argument isn't even close. The only way to prove this point is through facts and figures, not by words that are always unimportant.

Grantland Rice For a few examples—after a bad football year where both Southern California and UCLA were beaten two or three times, they outdrew Army and Navy. The western record count was 103,000 and this isn't the first time 100,000 has been beaten on the West coast. Under the same conditions Southern California and UCLA in the East, Midwest or South would have drawn from 30,000 to 40,000 at the limit.

Now we come to racing, which interests more millions than most people know—more than almost any other sport or business or whatever you care to call it.

Richest Purses in West

Those who follow racing know the purses offered in New York, Chicago, Maryland, Florida, New Orleans and Kentucky, all among the leading racing states, rarely top $50,000.

Here are some of the purses to be offered at Santa Anita, Calif.:

One hundred thousand dollar Santa Anita handicap—March 9. Richest all-age race.

One hundred thousand dollar Santa Anita Derby—February 23. Tops for the three-year-olds.

Fifty thousand dollars for the Santa Catalina, San Pasqual, Santa Margarita, San Antonio and San Juan Capistrano. Five in all eight $25,000 stakes.

A stake total of $650,000 for the all-time average of $43,333 per stake.

No purse is under $3,000. Can the East, South or Midwest approach these figures? You know what the answer is.

No.

New Baseball Territory

All this is further proof that the two lopsided big leagues, which need unlimited night baseball for many teams to keep going, can no longer overlook a new country in the way of population and general sporting interest. Los Angeles and San Francisco are far ahead of most of the big league cities in the matter of population and enthusiasm for sports.

It is generally realized by those who know their sport that St. Louis, Boston and Philadelphia are one major-league club towns. Cincinnati, Washington and a few others don't belong in the same class with Los Angeles and San Francisco on the sporting side. The fact is that California and Florida are our two best climate states, unless you happen to like colder weather.

It is all a question of facts, figures and fair play. California merely happens to be the best football state, the best racing state, the best track-and-field state in the country. Neither New York nor Chicago could even approach the Olympic games of 1932 which Los Angeles held. Both cities know this.

One trouble is that too many people shy away from facts and truth. Especially those interested only on the side of the dollar.

For one example, New York has neither the football nor racing facilities to be ranked in the same class with Los Angeles, unless you enjoy looking at football games back of a thick pillar or being trampled underfoot at a race track. In the course of too many years, your correspondent has worked in the border states, the deep South, the East, the Midwest, the Far West and the Southwest. Pride of section is a good thing, but the United States is much more important.

There was a time when the Atlantic and Pacific coasts were many days apart. Now they are only a few hours apart. This also goes for the South and the North. The Gulf and the Great Lakes are now only a hop, step and jump away.

But up to date the Far West has taken all the worst of it from big league baseball and big league pro football. The South's major problem has been spectator capacity where only the New Orleans stadium can handle 70,000 people. And no Southern city has a population around the million mark. This, in time, will be taken care of. Certainly the South's contribution to every form of sport has been enormous, whether it be baseball, football, golf or other sports. The South, plus California, has the jump in those games, with practically 12 months of play.

Fast Feathering Is Desirable in Poultry

Superior Broilers Are Rapid Developers

Early development of feathers by a chicken is a good indication that it will make a well-feathered and otherwise desirable broiler or fryer. This is the conclusion reached by research workers of the U. S. Department of agriculture, after three years of scientific studies.

Prospects for superior market quality are still better if the chicken gains weight rapidly between the ages of 3 and 6 weeks and has a fairly broad breast at the end of that period.

These characteristics were found to be inherited. A poultryman, therefore, can improve his breeding stock, for the production of broilers and fryers, by selecting those chickens that feather and develop rapidly during the first few weeks of life. Differences among birds are not so readily apparent at a later date.

FAST FEATHERING

Selection for fast feathering can readily be made when the chicks are about a day old by noting those that have the longest feather sheaths or partially developed quills.

Agriculture In the News

Cranberries

Originally called craneberries, cranberries were found growing wild in the marshes by the Pilgrims in 1620. Containing 13 important minerals and vitamins they are highly prized as a food article.

During late years they found their place in the industrial field. Cranberry wax added to other waxes will raise the melting point of those waxes.

Ursolic acid from the wax of cranberry skins has important therapeutic applications. The oil from the seeds is used in shampoos. Cranberry meal has become valued as a filler for plastics.

Improved Machinery New Plow

New type plow adjustable for deep plowing will find many uses.

A new plow designed by Oliver corporation, Chicago, has additional bases set a few inches below and behind, as well as to one side of the upper bases. The latter are adjusted to normal depth for conventional plowing, while the lower bases, by widening and deepening the cut, crumble the plowpan, or hard undersoil, hitherto left untouched, mixing it slightly with the lower portion of the top soil.

New Poultry Disease

A new disease, known as "Newcastle disease," is said to be prevalent in many parts of the world, causing severe losses in poultry. It has made its appearance in the United States. Veterinary association authorities say that the symptoms include sudden deaths, droopy appearance, ruffled feathers, coughing and sneezing, and sometimes nervous disorders such as curled toes or wing paralysis. So far death loss in the U. S. has been low.

The Great Hotel

By JOYCE N. MARTIN
McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Features.

"VERY well," said the associate manager of the palatial seaside hotel at Coronado. "We'll cancel Miss La Crosse's suite. Yes, yes. It shall be exactly as you say." He turned to his secretary in annoyance. "That Hollywood!" he glared. "I give up. You never can tell what it'll do next. Well—we don't get the La Crosse wedding party, after all. It seems the bride hasn't time for a honeymoon with her lieutenant commander. Has to report at the studio at 6 a. m. for retakes."

"And now the studio press agent has thought up still another of his coy publicity stunts. The La Crosse suite, since it was paid for in advance, must be given to the first enlisted man who asks for a room at the front desk." With nine admirals and three generals in residence, the best the house had to offer would go to some soldier or sailor who'd probably never even stepped inside a first-class hotel before!

There they stood. A shy little sailor, leaning on a cane, trickles of water down his black raincoat making a puddle on the highly polished marble floor. And behind him, nervously holding a tattered, bedraggled suitcase—obviously the bride. "We couldn't find a room anywhere in all San Diego. Can you, perhaps, put us up for the night?"

A room for the night! With reservations for the world's rich, famous and fashionable running six weeks to two months in advance! The perfect composure of the two desk clerks on duty was suddenly jolted. For the associate manager handed the pen to the sailor, who scrawled happily: "Mr. and Mrs. Ed Miller, Tomahawk, Minnesota."

Now the little bride stepped forward— young, inexperienced, but nevertheless practical. "How . . . how much will the room be?" she faltered. "We've got to be sure we have enough money."

"It's already attended to," the associate manager snapped almost crossly. "Number twenty - three! Front! Show Mr. and Mrs. Miller to Suite 140."

140! The bellhop's mouth fell open. The best suite in the hotel . . . reserved exclusively for admirals and movie stars! He relieved Mrs. Miller of her shabby suitcase and led them to the elevator. Ed and Jenny Miller followed slowly, for Jenny had to help her husband of six hours to walk. Jenny was so proud when Ed won his Purple Heart.

It suddenly flashed to bellhop twenty-three that the Boss had singled him out because he'd been in the navy once, himself. Of course it was strictly against the rules to get personal with the hotel guests. But this, somehow, seemed different. "Where'd you get yours?" he asked the limping sailor.

"Shrapnel . . . on a D-E off Leyte."

"Hey. Whaddya know! I was there too," grinned the bellhop. "On a tin can. Got surveyed out four months ago. . . ."

"It's my first day out of the hospital," volunteered Seaman Miller. "We were married just this morning over at City Hall. But no hotel room anywhere. I guess we're plenty lucky. . . ."

The little bride had rushed to the enormous porch overlooking the pounding sea. It was the first time she'd ever seen the surf thundering along the beach. She found she had no words to utter. It was so beautiful, so perfect, that the tears poured down her cheeks. Little Seaman Miller hobbled over and understandingly put his arm around her shoulders. "There, there, Jenny girl," he said. "I told you our dreams would come true some day."

Jenny's eyes shone as bright as the perky little bow she had placed in her hair to dress up her mouse-colored suit for dinner.

The maitre d'hotel bowed as they paused in the doorway of the formal dining hall. Smilingly he led them to a large table set directly beneath the glittering chandelier. Then there they were, standing beside the table of honor where four naval officers were seated. When they saw, Ed and Jenny, they jumped up and pushed back their chairs. Four admirals! Ed's eyes bulged at seeing more gold braid than he'd ever seen in one spot in all his life. And Jenny's lips just parted in an excited "Oh-h-h."

"Mr. and Mrs. Miller? May I present Admiral Eckstrom, Admiral Jones, Admiral Waddington, Admiral Keyes."

"Won't you join us for dinner?" Admiral Waddington was speaking. Admirals Keyes and Eckstrom nodded to the wine steward, who was wheeling a gleaming silver cooler, packed with cracked ice. There came the loud pop of a cork. Now the champagne was bubbling merrily in the hollow-stemmed glasses.

"I should like to propose a toast—to the bride and groom," said Admiral Jones. And while the four admirals drank to the health of Ed and Jenny Miller the orchestra began to play a gay medley of navy tunes.

Ed looked softly into Jenny's twinkling eyes. "Doggone if this isn't something we'll be telling our grandchildren about," he grinned.

Fruit Coffee Cake Livens Party Table

Fruit coffee cake waves a magic wand over the party table when friends drop in of an afternoon, writes the Country Cooking Editor of Capper's Farmer.

"Made of ordinary quick-bread dough, it's glamorized with raisins, nuts and spices," she writes. "Serve it at any meal for the family's delight. A thin icing puts it in the dessert class at lunch or dinner."

Fruit Coffee Cake.
1/2 c. raisins 1 tsp. flour
1/2 c. water 1 egg
1 tsp. lemon juice 1/4 c. milk
Ground cloves 1 1/2 c. flour
Ground cinnamon 2 tsp. baking powder
1/4 c. shortening 1/2 c. sugar

Combine seedless raisins and water. Bring to a boil and cook for two minutes. Gradually add 1 tsp. flour to mixture, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add lemon juice and a dash of cloves and cinnamon. Cool. Combine raisin mixture, lightly beaten egg and milk. Sift all-purpose flour, baking powder and sugar together. Work in shortening so particles are approximately the size of a small pea. Pour liquid mixture into middle of dry ingredients; stir two together just enough to mix well. Spoon into greased tube pan. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375° F.) for 25 minutes.

DON RAY COMING TO EAGLES HALL IN BLUE ISLAND

On Saturday, January 19th at the Eagles Hall in Blue Island, Stephen Busha presents Don Ray and his Eleven Magical Musicians featuring charming Toni Bari.

Lee Savage, pianist, is gathering a lot of well deserved attention for her key board handling. In practically every number, Lee has a special "take" for her piano talent which gets enthusiastic comments from the public. Another added feature is Don Cox, trombonist and blues singer just released from Orrin Tucker's band in the Navy and his buddy, Bob Dennis that does a grand job on tenor.

By popular request this band has played return engagements at the famous Melodymill Ballroom and the Band Box in downtown Chicago. The reason for such popularity is simple—the dancing beat the band has. Satisfying the public is Don Ray's motto.

RULE 26

The Pullman conductor one night found a red lantern hanging on a berth so he looked up George, the porter, and asked, "George, why is that red lantern hanging there?"

"Well, Boss, Rule 26 in the rule book says that you should always hang up a red lantern when the rear end of the sleeper is exposed."

PALOS PLAYERS TO PRESENT PRIZE WINNING PLAY

The director of a play, the good Mr. Webster informs us, trains actors, and combines business, scenery, lighting, etc. A mighty big responsibility, we'd say. But with Zay Smith in the director's chair, we are confident that "Craig's Wife", the Village Players' next selection, will be another in his series of successes. We all remember "The Night of January Sixteenth" and "Claudia" two outstanding tributes to Zay's directing ability.

Give a good director a prize winning play, and the result will be spectacular. At least that's what the Players are anticipating for this next play by Geo. Kelly, to be presented on March 7, 8 and 9. This is the first time that the amateur theatrical group has presented a play on three successive evenings, and it is an attempt on the part of the organization to find a happy solution to the problem of pleasing the public and itself in the matter of play-scheduling.

You all know a Mrs. Craig... a woman who wants to manage the lives and hearts of others, and whose scheming plans always are made to fit into her own selfish pattern. There are many women like her, just as there are many men like Walter Craig, and the play's success is due to this true to life quality.

Author Kelly often has said that the "truth is all that counts... if a thing is true it can be acted well, and audiences will go to see it." This theory of his is well demonstrated in "Craig's Wife" which, incidentally, has been described as his most successful production.

It was first produced on Broadway in 1925, and was awarded the Pulitzer prize. It soon became a real box-office success, and has been impressing playgoers ever since.

Critics whose opinions on theatre are not frequently questioned, have stated that George Kelly's honest observation and realistic portrayal in "Craig's Wife" have made it the brilliant hit it is.

Director Smith's cast is already meeting for rehearsals, with Peg Gibbons learning the leading lady's part. Peg's masterful handling of her recent role in "Trial of Mary Dugan" assures us that Mrs. Craig will be excellently portrayed. Palos audiences have become well acquainted with her art of interpretation, and we may look forward to this forthcoming characterization.

Long-suffering Walter Craig is played by new-comer Donald Bussey, whom we saw for the first time in "Trial of Mary Dugan" last December. At that time, Don played a convincing Assistant District Attorney.

The role of Miss Austen will be played by Stella Rivers, while Win Algire plays Mrs. Frazier. Maisie's role will be handled by Ethel Berdan, and Nancy Baker has been cast as Ethel Gordon Harding plays the part of the messenger.

Assisting Zay Smith with the problems of the director is Nona Matthews who has shown by past performance that her efficient management will make her a capable assistant director.

A good director, a prize winning play and an enthusiastic cast, what more could an audience ask? Make a date with "Craig's Wife" and the Palos Village Players on March 7, 8 or 9.
